AUCTIONEERING.

THE subscriber respectfully announces to the public, that he continues the above business, and will be glad to accommodate those wishing to have their property sold. The quality of this land is as good as any in the country and in a good state of cultivation. The improvements on the farm consist of two dwelling houses, one a frame house, one a stone house, ten rooms and a hall. The out-houses are all good, and a superior young Apple and Peach Orchard on it now bearing choice fruit, the other dwelling house on this quite comfortable and suitable for a small family, has a fine young orchard on it also of peaches, pears and apples, all choice fruit. The farm is well watered and suitable for a stock farm, the fencing on the farm is all good and plenty of timber on the place. This year there was raised on the place 100 acres of Corn and 100 acres of Wheat, the balance is well set in grass. It will be sold in three parcels if desired all together. One half of the purchase money to be paid in hand the balance in payments. Persons are invited to examine the land. Any one wishing to purchase can do so privately by applying to the subscriber on the farm. At the same time I will sell my

The Crimson Ribbon that Bound her Hair.

Suggested while listening to Miss L. W. P. . . . of Mayville, Ky., as she sang,—

The crimson ribbon that bound her hair,—

How trembled, like tints that the sunset weaves!

The crimson fires in the autumn leaves—

While her song of sweetest charmed the air!

Her song of sweetest—the low refrain,

O! it stole through the heart like a fairy's strain.

The autumn leaves near the sunset stain,

Of the ribbon that bound her braids apart!

And the mistle's passionate low refrain,

I hear in the song of the autumn rain.

Yet I hold of all so bright, and fair,

Only the ribbon that bound her hair!

She walks I know by the rippling tide,

Of the river that winds to the ocean's shore;

Doth she seek of the love that she loses there,

While the crimson leaves float far and wide?

For another home more blest than mine,

Both her song of sweetest and the low refrain,

O! it stole through the heart like a fairy's strain.

While I, in my trembling fingers twine,

Only the ribbon that bound her hair.

Yet like the tints the sunset weaves,

Of the crimson leaves through the autumn leaves,

She hath lent to my home a light more fair.

In the crimson ribbon that bound her hair.

The Suez Canal Open.

The news by the Africa, announcing the opening of the Suez Canal on the 17th ult., a vessel loaded with coal having passed through from the Mediterranean to the Red Sea.

This practical realization of this great work falsifies the predictions of the English engineers who never could see the feasibility or utility of a work which gives France an outlet and approach to British possessions in India.

The farseeing mind of the first Napoleon contemplated the great advantages to French commerce of having the Asiatic and African continent separated at a point where the Isthmus, only seventy-five miles wide, divides two of the most important seas on the globe.

The second, or third, Napoleon, as he dynastically fixes his title, who follows so closely the ideas of his great uncle, determined to accomplish the work.

What Necho and Darius had done for Persia the Emperor believed feasible for France, and M. Lesseps, with a capital of £4,000,000, has succeeded in bringing the task to a completion, the canal being 90 miles long, 20 feet deep at low water level of the Mediterranean, and 330 feet wide on the surface. This is one of the engineering enterprises which distinguish the present era, and its commercial benefits will rebound to the world. Like the telegraph and continental railroads, its legitimate purpose is to shorten distance, save time, and open better facilities for the commerce of the world. The Isthmus of Panama is the only obstacle now to the complete circumnavigation of the globe, by the most direct and shortest route.

About Railway Travel.

Let the American people far and wide reflect upon the fact that now we cite them, on the authority of an official report of one of the British council agents.

"In Germany, since the beginning of the railroad system, twenty or thirty years ago, not a life has been lost in consequence of carelessness or mismanagement on the part of railroad agents."

A few persons have killed themselves by incautiously approaching or jumping off a train, but none have been killed by what are called accidents or casualties.

This is the fact; and now let us look at the reason of it. In the first place, the German trains are limited to a maximum rate of speed—say twenty-five or thirty miles an hour—which is regarded as the highest rate compatible with the regular way and fear of material, and the consequent safety of human life. In the second place, the iron machinery, the rails, the wheels, the axles, &c., are by law renewed at the end of every certain number of years whether they show signs of weakness or not; for, experiment having proved that iron, after a time, gets disintegrated or disorganized by the incessant beating of the wheels upon the rails, the prudent Germans think it better to relay their tracks before than after a fracture has killed or maimed a hundred persons. In the third place, on all the German railroads guards are stationed at such intervals that the engines of the locomotive are never out of sight of some one to warn him of the condition of the track.—N. Y. Post.

ANOTHER ATLANTIC CABLE PROJECT.

The project of a submarine telegraph from the eastern to the western hemisphere, by route of the tropic regions, has a look of accomplishment. The Emperor of France, Brazil and Hayti, and the Kings of Portugal, Denmark and Italy, have formed a treaty, in connection with a company, for the laying of the cable. The line is to commence at Lisbon, Portugal; thence by the coast of Morocco to the Canaries; thence to Cape Verde, on the coast of Africa; thence to Cape Verde Island; from which point the Atlantic is to be traversed till Cape San Roque, South America, is reached. At this point a branch line leads to the principal cities of South America, and another is to be carried through the West India Islands to New Orleans.

The highest contracting powers agree to afford all the required facilities and guarantees for its construction, contributing the necessary steam vessels to be employed in laying the cable, and maintain the rights and interests of the Company for ninety-nine years. The Emperor of France gives four millions, and the Emperor of Brazil three millions of francs as donations to the work. Other nations are invited to join as Government guarantees, and the United States are especially invited. The cable is to be treated as neutral in war by the contracting powers. Copies of the treaty have been forwarded to the Secretary of State and to the President.

LARGE PEACH ORCHARD.—The largest peach-grower in Delaware is Mr. Anthony Keybold. He has a peach orchard of a thousand acres, of which six hundred are trees of a bearing age. His crop last year amounted to sixty thousand baskets, of which the average price was one dollar per basket—sixty thousand dollars. Deducting twenty-five per cent for expenses, the net profits of the year may be set down at forty-five thousand dollars. The aggregate profits of his peach culture for the last, and the three preceding years, may be safely estimated at the snug sum of $150,000.

Sir CHARLES NATIER'S OFFICERS.—At the battle of Meenane, an officer, who had been doing good service, came up and said: "Sir Charles, we have taken a standard."

The General looked at him, but made no reply, and, turning round, began speaking to some one else, upon which the engineer, thinking he had not been heard, repeated: "Sir Charles, we have taken a standard."

Sir Charles turned sharp round upon him, with a thundering exclamation, and said: "The go and take another!"

Washington Territory.

In a letter to the Springfield Republican Mr. Bowles speaks of Washington territory as follows:

"Is it not a little singular that only our forty-oddth State should bear the name Washington? That it was left to this day, and to this corner of the Stars of the Republic, the upper half of old Oregon, divided by the Columbia river and the fortieth parallel for the southern boundary, and extending up to the forty-ninth, to which, under the reaction from the unmartial Polk's 'fifty-four forty or fight' pretensions, our northern line was ignominiously limited. Its population is small, less than twenty thousand, and not likely to grow fast, or make it a State for some years to come, unless the chance, not probable, of rich gold and silver mines within its lines should flow it with rapid immigration. But it holds some wealth, and a large future through its limitless forests and its probable immense coal deposits. Of all its surface, west of the Colorado or Nevada mountains, not more than one-eighth is prairie or open land—the rest is covered by a growth of timber, such as, alike in density and in size, no other like space on the earth's surface can boast. Beyond the mountains to the east, the country partakes of the same characteristics as that below it; hilly, barren of trees, unfruitful, whose chief promises and possibilities are in the cattle and sheep life. Its arable land this side of the mountains, where the forests

THE WESTERN CITIZEN

FRIDAY MORNING, OCT. 6, 1865.

A lawyer, who pined himself on his skill in cross-examining a witness, had once an odd-looking genius upon whom to operate. "You say, sir, that the prisoner is a thief?" "Yes, sir, because she confessed it." "And you also swear that she bound shoes for you subsequent to the confession?" "I do, sir." "Then," (giving a sagacious look at the Court,) "are we to understand that you employ dishonest persons to work for you even after their realties are known?" "Of course, how else, pray, could I get assistance from a lawyer?" The witness was promptly ordered to "stand down."

A Mrs. Mayberry, of Portsmouth, N. H. some three years since bought an old mahogany chair with hair cloth cushion, at auction, for fifty cents. After taking it home she undertook the repair of the cushion, and on opening it discovered an important will of one of the Derby family, which sent a large estate to different heirs from those who have inherited it. Information was sent to England, and a special messenger was sent out, who gave the lady a large reward. How much is not known, but as she was enabled to invest $50,000 in Government stock last year, it is thought she made a profitable business in her chain speculation.

Years ago a native of Newburyport, now residing in Boston, met there a man intoxicated and in want. The man said he had been led away and was desirous of assistance. He was taken in and, when sober, was furnished him to return to his

Scotland, a farmer in the parish of... early opportunity of visiting the news to his shepherd, with whom the minister was a particular favorite. "You will be glad to hear, John, that the University of St. Andrews has conferred on our minister a doctor's degree." "I am no way surprised at that," said the shepherd. "Mair than twenty years syne he cured my wife o' a colic. He should have been a doctor lang syne!"

A master in one of the public schools having occasion to punish one of his pupils for some misdemeanor, placed him on the platform to wait until he had heard some classes recite. The culprit took advantage of the teacher's engagement and escaped from the school house. The master, being somewhat vexed, promised another scholar a reward of a shilling if he would bring the runaway back to the schoolhouse; but before this was accomplished, the boy who had escaped heard of the offered reward, and sent word to the teacher that he would "return and take the licking for sixpence, cash down."

"Come till America, Pa." writes a son of the Emerald Isle to his friend in Ireland; "tis a fine country to make a living in. All ye have to do is to get a three-cornered box and fill it with brick, and carry it till the top of a four-story building, and the man at the top does the work."

A young gentleman was undergoing an examination at the College of Surgeons, when the questions put were of a very searching character. After answering a number of queries, he was asked what would prescribe to throw a patient into a profuse perspiration. "Why," exclaimed the youthful Galen, "I would send him here to be examined; and if that did not give him a sweat, I do not know what would."

There were two soldiers in Grant's army lying beneath their blankets, looking up at the stars in a Virginian sky. Says Jack, "What made you go into the army, 'Tom'?" "Well," replied Tom, "I had no wife, and I loved war. What made you go to the war, Jack?" "Well," he replied, "I had a wife, and I loved peace, so I went to the war."

"Wife," said a married man, looking for his bootjack, after she was in bed. "I have a place for all things, and you ought to know it by this time." "Yes," replied she, "I ought to know where you keep your late hours, but I don't."

An old soldier whose nose had been cropped off by a sabre cut, happened to give a few pennies to a beggar, who exclaimed in return: "God preserve your eyesight." "Why so?" inquired the veteran. "Because, sir, if your eyes should grow weak you couldn't keep spectacles on them."

It is a beautiful thought, and deserves a more permanent preservation than it is likely to find among the wails of newspaperdom where we meet with it, that "Prayer should be the key of day and the lock of the night."

A stinging man inquired of a workman at his table if he knew how many cakes he had eaten. The latter was unable to say. "Thirty three," roared the miser. "Veiy well," said the workman, "you count and I'll eat."

An honest Hibernian, trundling along a hand cart containing all his valuables, was accosted with, "Well, Patrick, you are a moving again, I see!" "Faith, I am," he replied, "for the times are so hard, it's a dale cheaper hiring hand carts than paying rents!"

A cunning juryman addressed the clerk of the court when administering the oath, saying: "Speak up, I cannot hear what you say." "Stop, are you deaf?" said Baron Alderson. "Then you may leave the box, as it is necessary for a juryman to hear both sides."

Among the schools books used in France is one entirely unknown in this country, consisting of fac similes of letters written by business men, eminent people, &c.; intended to teach children the art of reading writing, of which there is almost universal ignorance in America. Every variety of hand is selected, beginning with the best and gradually proceeding to scrawls which puzzle printers and "blind letters" men in post offices.
